"Just as Darwin discovered the law of development of organic nature, so Marx discovered the law of development of human history: the simple fact, hitherto concealed by an overgrowth of ideology, that mankind must first of all eat, drink, have shelter and clothing, before it can pursue politics, science, art, religion, etc.; that therefore production of the immediate material means of subsistence and consequently the degree of economic development attained by a given people or during a given epoch form the foundation upon which the state institutions, the legal conceptions, art, and even the ideas on religion, of the people concerned have been evolved, and in the light of which they must, therefore, be explained, instead of vice versa, as had hitherto been the case."

(Friedrich Engels, 1883, “Speech at the Graveside of Karl Marx”)

"The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles."  (Karl Marx, 1848)

"I have begun with the assumption that the Orient is not an inert fact of nature."  (Edward Said, 1984)

“Can one divide human reality, as indeed human reality seems to be genuinely divided, into clearly different cultures, histories, traditions, societies, even races, and survive the consequences humanly”?  (Edward Said, 1984)

“… the world of humankind constitutes a manifold, a totality of interconnected processes, and inquiries that disassemble this totality into bits and then fail to reassemble it falsify reality.”  (Eric Wolf, 1982)

"Culture has been defined in as many different ways as there have been writers on the subject, for it is a mark of pride that one should coin a more 'elegant' formulation of the concept than his predecessors.  All definitions of culture, however, can be divided into two general types: the behavioral and the normative.  The behavioral definition of culture states in various ways that culture is learned and shared behavior…. If, however, we assume that the basic criterion is whether others in the same society regard the actor's behavior as idiosyncratic, we are saying that culture exists in the minds of the beholders and have thereby departed from a behavioral definition and taken from the normative position."  (Robert F. Murphy, 1971)

“Don’t get me right, I’m just asking;”  “If you ask me a question I don’t know, I’m not going to answer;”  “The future ain’t what it used to be;”  “Nobody goes there anymore, it’s too crowded.”  (Y. Berra, 2003)

"If we really want to understand the moral grounds of economic life, and by extension, human life, it seems to me that we must start instead with the very small things: the everyday details of social existence, the way we treat our friends, enemies, and children—often with gestures so tiny (passing the salt, bumming a cigarette) that we ordinarily never stop to think about them at all.  Anthropology has shown us just how different and numerous are the ways in which humans have been known to organize themselves.  But it also reveals some remarkable commonalities—fundamental moral principles that appear to exist everywhere, and that will always tend to be invoked, wherever people transfer objects back and forth or argue about what other people owe them"  (David Graeber, 2011)

Course Description

This course surveys the critical and historical study of cultural and social theory. Theorists and schools of thought, including Marxism, functionalism, structuralism, historical materialism, world systems, critical theory, feminist social analysis, postmodernism, post-colonial theory, and globalization, will be examined in the course.

This course is an advanced seminar for graduate students in the social sciences, humanities, or related disciplines. It is a required course for the doctorate in urban studies at UNO.

Course Goals and Purposes
1. To highlight and discuss the history and significance of influential theoretical trends in the social sciences and humanities, with special reference to the concept of culture.
2. To interpret and debate the works of the seminal thinkers who have most influenced the development of cultural and social theory.
3. To demystify the significance of "theory" as a tool for research.
4. To critically assess and debate the competing research strategies employed by social scientists and humanists in their attempts to understand and explain the human condition.
5. To analyze, understand and question the basic assumptions that underlie theoretical positions and paradigms.
6. To consider the usefulness and validity of the various categories (labels, boxes, schemes) that have been used to model or represent competing theoretical perspectives.
7. To develop skills for systematically and critically assessing, applying, and interpreting culture and social theory.
8. To understand how social science research is shaped methodologically and theoretically.

Course Requirements and Grades (open to discussion and change by seminar members)

1. ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY
   An "annotated bibliography" is a preliminary aid to research. The goal is to assemble a collection of reference sources all centered on an identified subject/topic of research. There should be at least 15 entries in your bibliography. Each entry is a brief summary of the source, along with a brief assessment of its significance, importance, and relevance to the topic of the research. This assignment should be used to further your own research interests in your graduate studies. However, one important criteria is that you consider your subject/topic from an anthropological perspective.

2. FINAL EXAM: Comprehensive essay exam on all readings, class discussions and films.

3. CLASS PARTICIPATION:
   Including:
   a) oral reports on aspects of class readings/ "briefing" the readings
   b) active participation in all seminar discussions on the readings and films
   c) attendance and attitude (see note 1 below)

4. INTELLECTUAL JOURNAL
   It is highly recommended that you maintain an "intellectual journal" of the readings in the course. Such journals are aids to studying and useful for recall of issues and questions during class discussions. They are a running account of responses (analyses, critiques, questions) to the readings assigned. The entries are similar to marginalia, the notes that scholars used to make in the books they were using for their studies.

IMPORTANT NOTES:
1. Attendance at all classes is a requirement, not an option. If you take this course you assume the responsibility of attending it. Nothing but legitimate medical or life emergencies should cause you to miss class during the semester.

2. All students are asked to take an in-class photo.

3. Plagiarism and Academic Honesty Policy: It is understood that all students at all times will be familiar with and uphold the UNO's regulations and standards of academic honesty. There are no exceptions to this expectation. Students are expected to conduct themselves with integrity at all times. All students are responsible for knowing the university’s standards, rules, and regulations with reference to plagiarism and any form of cheating. Students are forewarned that breaches to the code of ethics concerning cheating and plagiarism will not be tolerated by the instructor of this course, and that infractions will be punished to the fullest extent possible. Improper use of source materials, failure to attribute data or ideas to their originators, or any improper use of internet materials, of any and all kinds, are all serious violations of the academic honor code of conduct. In summary, Cheating/plagiarism—DON’T DO IT!

All students should read the UNO student "Code of Conduct," available in its entirety on line at the UNO web page, for important information about the rules, regulations, requirements, responsibilities and rights that govern all classroom situations at the university. Students should be fully familiar with the “Academic Dishonesty Policy,” part of which is reprinted below. It reads (in part):

“Academic honesty and intellectual integrity are fundamental to the process of learning and to evaluating academic performance. Maintaining such integrity is the responsibility of all members of the University. All faculty members and teaching assistants should encourage and maintain an atmosphere of academic honesty. They should explain to the students the regulations defining academic honesty and the sanctions for violating these regulations.

However, students must share the responsibility for creating and maintaining an atmosphere of honesty and integrity. Students should be aware that personally completing assigned work is essential to learning. Students who are aware that others in a course are cheating or otherwise committing academic dishonesty have a responsibility to bring the matter to the attention of the course instructor and/or academic unit head, or the Associate Dean. To promote academic integrity, students will use the following pledge when required by the instructor.

I pledge that I have completed the work I am submitting according to the principles of academic integrity as defined in the statement on Academic Dishonesty in the UNO Student Code of Conduct.

Academic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to, the following:

Cheating: The act of deception by which a student misrepresents mastery of information on an academic exercise. These acts can be either premeditated or not. Examples include, but not limited to, copying or allowing someone else to copy from another student, unauthorized use of a textbook or other material during an examination; inappropriate and unauthorized collaboration during an academic exercise; unauthorized use or possession of specialty prepared materials, such as notes or formula lists, during an academic exercise.

Plagiarism: The unacknowledged inclusion of someone else’s actual words, ideas or data or the paraphrasing of someone else’s words, ideas or data as if they were the student's own.

All source material must be appropriately identified and cited according to the conventions for acknowledging source material. (Students are responsible for learning these scholarly conventions; disregard of proper citation conventions can be considered plagiarism.

Academic Misconduct: The actual or attempted tampering or misuse of academic records or materials such as transcripts and examinations. Examples include stealing, buying, or otherwise obtaining all or part of an unadministered test or academic exercise; selling or giving away or engaging in bribery to get all or part of an unadministered academic exercise or any information about it; changing or altering a grade book, test, or other official academic records of the University; entering a building or office without authorization for the purpose of changing a grade or tampering in any way with grades or examinations.

Falsification/Fabrication: The intentional use of false information or the falsification of research, findings, personal or university documents with the intent to deceive. Examples include citing information not taken from the source indicated; listing sources in a bibliography not used in the academic exercise; inventing data or source information; submitting as one’s own any academic exercise prepared totally or in part for/ by another; taking a test for another student or permitting another student to take a test for oneself; submitting work previously used for credit in another course without express permission of the instructor: falsifying or misrepresenting oneself on resumes or other such documents or university related forms.

Accessory To Acts of Academic Dishonesty: The act of facilitating, supporting, or conspiring with another student to commit or attempt to commit any form of academic dishonesty.

Sanctions for students found in violation of the academic dishonesty policy range from receiving an F or zero on the assignment in question to suspension/expulsion from the university.”

Students should ask questions of the instructor if they do not fully understand the policies of UNO with regard to academic dishonesty. Taking this course (and receipt of this course syllabus) becomes a contract bound by the rules of the UNO academic community. The instructor expects all students to act as if a full honor code system were in place. As a matter of policy, the instructor will seek the maximum available penalties for any student violating the rules of the university with regard to “academic dishonesty.”

4. Any student who needs disability assistance or accommodations should make proper arrangements with the Office of Disability Services (ODS), located in the University Center.

5. Electronic recording instruments or any electronic devices (audio or visual) are not permitted for use during class. The one exception to this rule is that electronic readers, on which students have course readings, may be used in the same manner as a book when close readings of assigned texts are occurring in class discussions. No typing may occur on such devices, e.g., i-pads.

6. No cell phones should be on during class. If, for example, emergency situations or parental responsibilities are in force, you may keep your phones on vibrate. If called under such circumstances, you should simply and quietly leave the room to deal with the situation.

Course Format

The format of this class is structured in the style of a reading seminar. In a seminar, common readings (and films), as well as the actual writing in which seminar members are engaged, are the focus of class discussions. Seminar members, who collectively make up a community of scholars, will be expected to take an active role in, and to be fully prepared to contribute to, all discussions. Members of the seminar also will be expected to take a leading role in discussions with regard to assigned materials. The task of the seminar in this case is to facilitate the process of understanding theoretical questions and issues. The sharing of thoughts, insights, and questions between seminar members in an atmosphere of trust and support is a primary objective of the seminar experience. The expectation is that the discussions in class will help illuminate and critique the subtleties, complexities, and nuances of cultural and social theory.

The reading assignments are structured to provide students with the necessary background and information to contribute to classroom discussions. Even though not all the readings will be discussed in class, students are expected to keep up with the reading schedule and to be prepared for class. To avoid loss of valuable class time, students should be familiar with the readings due and should bring to class for reference their intellectual journals. Students are free to raise issues and questions in seminar discussions concerning the readings, and to ask for clarifications or explanations of what they do not fully follow or understand. Coming to class unprepared will seriously diminish the value and meaning of the class experience in this course for everyone. Coming to class prepared is an ongoing responsibility of all seminar participants. Attendance at all class sessions is expected.

"Active" (as opposed to "passive") participation and involvement in discussion, as well as the willingness to express controversial views and opinions, to ask questions, to guess, and to be wrong are all important aspects of learning the material presented in this class. It is the process of thinking that eventually translates into understanding. Disagreement with the instructor's views, interpretations, opinions and perspectives is encouraged. Passion and vigor in the presentation of controversial points of view are welcomed. Active participation, as well as the quality of participation, will be used as a means of raising grades of students for the course.

Please note that modifications of the course outline will be made throughout the block. Students are responsible for knowing about any and all changes as they occur.

Withdrawal Policy – Undergraduate only
Students are responsible for initiating action to resign from the University (withdraw from all courses) or from a course on or before dates indicated in the current Important dates calendar. Students who fail to resign by the published final date for such action will be retained on the class rolls even though they may be absent for the remainder of the semester and be graded as if they were in attendance. Failure to attend classes does not constitute a resignation. Check the dates on the Registrar’s website, http://www.registrar.uno.edu. Please consult The Bulletin for charges associated with dropping and adding courses.

Incomplete Policy – Undergraduate only
The grade of I means incomplete and is given for work of passing quality but which, because of circumstances beyond the student's control, is not complete. The issuance of the grade of I is at the discretion of the faculty member teaching the course. For all graduate and undergraduate students, a grade of I becomes a grade of F if it is not converted before the deadline for adding courses for credit (as printed in the Important Dates Calendar) of the next regular semester including summer semester.

Repeat Policy
When a student is permitted to repeat a course for credit, the last grade earned shall be the one which determines course acceptability for degree credit. A student who has earned a C or better in a course may not repeat that course unless, (1) the catalog description indicates that the course may be repeated for credit, or (2) the student's Dean gives prior approval for documented extenuating circumstances.

Graduate Policies
Graduate policies often vary from undergraduate policies. To view the applicable policies for graduate students, see the Graduate Student Handbook:
Academic Dishonesty Policy

Safety Awareness Facts and Education
Title IX makes it clear that violence and harassment based on sex and gender is a Civil Rights offense subject to the same kinds of accountability and the same kinds of support applied to offenses against other protected categories such as race, national origin, etc. If you or someone you know has been harassed or assaulted, you can find the appropriate resources here: http://www.uno.edu/student-affairs-enrollment-management/
UNO Counseling Services and UNO Cares
UNO offers care and support for students in any type of distress. Counseling Services assist students in addressing mental health concerns through assessment, short-term counseling, and career testing and counseling. Find out more at http://www.uno.edu/counseling-services/. First-year students often have unique concerns, and UNO Cares is designed to address those students succeed. Contact UNO Cares through http://www.uno.edu/fye/uno-cares.aspx.

Emergency Procedures
Sign up for emergency notifications via text and/or email at E2Campus Notification: http://www.uno.edu/ehso/emergency-communications/index.aspx. All emergency and safety procedures are explained at the Emergency Health and Safety Office: http://www.uno.edu/ehso/.

Diversity at UNO
As the most diverse public university in the state, UNO maintains a Diversity Affairs division to support the university’s efforts towards creating an environment of healthy respect, tolerance, and appreciation for the people from all walks of life, and the expression of intellectual point of view and personal lifestyle. The Office of Diversity Affairs promotes these values through a wide range of programming and activities. http://diversity.uno.edu/index.cfm

Learning and Support Services
Help is within reach in the form of learning support services, including tutoring in writing and math and other supplemental instruction. Visit the Learning Resource Center in LA 334, or learn more at http://www.uno.edu/lrc/.

Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity
UNO is an equal opportunity employer. The Human Resource Management department has more information on UNO’s compliance with federal and state regulations regarding EEOC in its Policies and Resources website: http://www.uno.edu/human-resource-management/policies.aspx
