ABSTRACT

The Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana, established by the first state constitution (1812) as the only appellate court in the judicial system, commenced its work on March 1, 1813. The Court's jurisdiction was limited to civil cases. It also had control over admissions to the bar and the rules for the administration of its own business. Created in the wake of the conflict between proponents of Louisiana's traditional civil law system and the promulgators of the federal government's territorial policy of common law imposition, the Supreme Court reinforced the ultimately accepted continuance of civil law within the limitations of the United States Constitution and Statutes.

The First Minute Book of the Supreme Court is a small, yet significant, part of the documentation of the Court's past. It is a segment of the extensive Louisiana Supreme Court records housed in the Department of Archives and Manuscripts of the Earl K. Long Library at the University of New Orleans. Dating from March, 1813 to May, 1818, the 340-page manuscript details the business of the Court's sessions at New Orleans, the seat of the eastern appellate district. Daily entries include the judges present, the cases before the Court, the disposition of cases, Court rules, and admissions to the bar.

The purpose of this edition is to provide a readable, accessible, and comprehensible document for use by the scholarly and research community. With the addition of missing docket numbers which serve as vi access points to Supreme Court case records and the annotation of persons, cases, and legal terms, the manuscript becomes an important guide for further investigation. The rendition of the text conforms to modern practices of historical editing recommended in the Harvard Guide to American History. No attempt was made to produce a facsimile of the original.
INTRODUCTION

The Supreme Court and Its Predecessors

The Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana was the direct descendant of the high courts that had sat in judgment over the people of Louisiana since 1712. This line of succession began with the French Superior Council (1712-1769), and was followed by the Spanish Cabildo (1769-1803), the Governor's Court (1803-1804), the Superior Court of the Territory of Orleans (1804-1812), and the Superior Court of the State of Louisiana (1812-1813). With the exception of the Governor's Court, all of these tribunals operated under, in whole or in part, Louisiana's various civil law systems.

Both the French and Spanish systems had similar origins in Roman civil law. During the French colonial period, the judicial system adhered to the laws of the Custom of Paris and the edicts of the King. After the Treaty of Paris (1763), when Louisiana was transferred to Spain, the Spanish laws of the Partidas and the Recopilacion de las Indias, the collection of laws regulating her colonies, governed Louisiana. Although substantive differences existed between the Spanish and the French civil law, the forms of legal procedures were quite similar and therefore familiar to the local population. This similarity eased the transition from one civil law system to another.

After forty years of Spanish domination, Louisiana changed sovereigns again, returning briefly to France by virtue of the Treaty of San Ildefonso (1800). This second French tutelage was short-lived and had little affect on the legal system. The Colonial Prefect, Pierre de Laussat, who had only arrived at the end of March, 1803, was forced to transfer the colony to the United States in December due to the sale of Louisiana to the Americans. Although he had had little time to alter the existing government, Laussat did abolish the Spanish Cabildo. Thus when Governor William C. C. Claiborne accepted the cession, no formal government or legal structure existed. After almost a century of civil law judicial systems, the people of Louisiana faced a major change, more jarring than had occurred in any former transfer.

President Jefferson, through his representative, Claiborne, intended to impose the American common law system on the new territory. Accordingly, Claiborne set up an Anglo-American court structure by creating a court of pleas which had limited criminal and civil jurisdiction. The Governor reserved to himself original jurisdiction in all matters not under the jurisdiction of the court of pleas and appellate jurisdiction in all civil cases. He was the sole judge in his so-called "Governor's Court." His unchecked power and the unfamiliar common law provoked strong opposition from the native population. Contrasted with the Spanish system which had been closely akin to the French, American common law was totally foreign, in form, procedure, and language.

In 1804, the Congress ameliorated the discontent by passing an act that divided the territory into the District of Louisiana and the Territory of Orleans, which later became the state of Louisiana. This legislation provided that the Orleans Territory could retain those laws in force which did not violate the Constitution or the Statutes of the United States. Claiborne's "Governor's Court" was replaced by the Superior Court of the Territory of Orleans. It had appellate and original jurisdiction in civil matters over one hundred dollars and concurrent jurisdiction with county courts in criminal cases.\(^5\)

Since Congress did not abrogate the civil laws extant in Orleans, the territorial legislature, in 1806, decided to compile these laws as a reference for the courts, lawyers, and the people. For this task, they selected two prominent jurists, Louis Moreau Lislet and James Brown. In 1808, these gentlemen submitted a "digest of the civil laws now in force in the territory of Orleans, with alterations and amendments adapted to the present form of government."\(^6\) This digest, known as the Louisiana Civil Code of 1808, was fashioned on the Napoleonic Code, although the existing laws were Spanish.\(^7\) One writer suggests that the "redactors considered the glamorous French model as the best formulation of the principles, institutions, and rules common to both the Spanish and French law." However, the committee did specify the Spanish laws when a difference existed between the French model and local practice.\(^8\)

When Governor Claiborne accepted the Code from the legislature, the United States, for the first time, officially recognized Louisiana's right to regulate legal conflicts of private individuals according to their traditional civil law system. But it was the State Constitution of 1812 that finally decided the conflict in favor of the civil law proponents. Article IV, Section 11, prohibited the state legislature from adopting "any system or code of laws by a general reference to the said system or code; but in all cases shall specify the several provisions of the laws it may enact." This language has appeared in every constitution since 1812. It prevents any particular legal system or code, civil or common, from being designated as the law of the state.9

Besides legitimatizing the civil law, Article IV also created the courts to interpret it. A Supreme Court replaced the Superior Court. Under the constitution, the Supreme Court could exercise only civil appellate jurisdiction in cases where the amount in contention exceeded three hundred dollars. The constitution divided the state into two appellate districts, eastern and western, and compelled the Court to ride circuit. Sessions were to be held in New Orleans, the seat of the eastern district, from November through July and in Opelousas, the seat of the western district, from August through October. The number of judges could range from a minimum of three to a maximum of five, to be appointed by the governor for terms of good behavior and to be removed only by address of three-fourths of both houses of the legislature. In 1813, the legislature fixed the number of Supreme Court judges at three.10

The Eastern District 1813-1818

The Supreme Court began its business on the first Monday in March, 1813. When the Court opened, Dominick A. Hall and George Mathews presented their commissions as judges. Mathews had served on the Superior Court since 1806, while Hall had occupied the position of United States District Judge in the territory since 1804. On March 9, 1813, when Peter Derbigny joined Hall and Mathews, the Court attained its total complement of judges. However, in July, Judge Hall resigned, leaving Mathews and Derbigny to preside alone until February 1815, when Francis Xavier Martin joined the Court. Martin, like Mathews, had sat previously on the Superior Court (1810-1813). These three gentlemen served throughout the time period covered by the First Minute Book. Between March, 1813, and May, 1818, they heard 291 appeals. Among these causes, the majority involved debts, contracts, inheritance, and community property, while the remainder touched upon a variety of other disputes between individuals.

In the course of resolving these cases, the Court defined the scope of its jurisdiction and set strict limits on its power to supervise the inferior courts. Among the first of these was Bermudez v.
Ibanez, an appeal arising from a decision of the former territorial Superior Court. The Supreme Court held that because the Superior Court had served as a court of last resort, no appeal could be made to the Supreme Court. This decision prevented the possible heavy flow of cases being appealed from the former court.

Shortly after this decision, the Court ruled in Brooks v. Weyman that an appeal brought before the Supreme Court could not be heard by a jury. While rehearings by a jury had been allowed in the Superior Court, the state constitution did not specify this method and therefore a jury could not be used in the Supreme Court. The Court's strict interpretation of the constitution strengthened the force of its decisions. "Much as every man must be convinced of the necessity of the appellate power, as contemplated by the constitution and the laws, the introduction of juries into the tribunals of the last resort can have no other tendency than to render every thing unsettled." The Court thus established its own identity and its own procedures distinct from its predecessor.

Later during that first term the judges were asked to define the Court's jurisdiction in criminal cases. They ruled in Laverty v. Duplessis that the Court's jurisdiction was limited to civil cases. The question of appellate criminal jurisdiction was raised again in Ogden v. Blackman. The judges reaffirmed their lack of jurisdiction in criminal litigation by ruling that the Court could not correct errors in criminal proceedings. It was not until the Constitution of 1845 that the Court was granted appellate jurisdiction in criminal actions.

The Court confirmed, on numerous occasions, its lack of supervisory control over lower state courts. In 1814, the judges decided, in Labatut v. Puche that they could not interfere in matters that were specifically assigned to the jurisdiction of the inferior courts. The Court reinforced its relationship to the inferior courts in the 1816 case of the Louisiana Bank v. Hampton. They ruled that the Supreme Court could not mandate the execution of a judgment in a lower court in a case which the Supreme Court had dismissed. And in Denis v. Cordeviolla, the Court stated that the constitution had not given it the right to hear cases appealed from the Court of Probates.

Critics of the state's early court structure often cite the high court's lack of controlling power over inferior courts as a major weakness. While this criticism may be partially deserved, it should be remembered that in most states the role of the high courts was in flux. Often precise distinction was lacking between the appellate and and trial courts within a state system. This kind of situation had existed in Louisiana during the territorial period with the Superior Court having both appellate and original civil jurisdiction and concurrent criminal jurisdiction. The limits placed on the Supreme Court by the 1812 constitution and the judges could be seen as unique, giving the Court a singular, though limited, role to play in the system. 22

The question of which laws were in force in the state remained a continuing problem for the Court. The most significant decision on this debate came in 1817. In Cottin v. Cottin 23 the Court resolved the question of whether the Code of 1808 had abolished all civil laws that had existed under the Spanish rule. The court wrote,

It must not be lost sight of, that our civil code is a digest of the civil laws, which were in force in this country, when it was adopted; that those laws must be considered as untouched, wherever the alterations and amendments, introduced in the digest, do not reach them; and that such parts of those laws only are repealed, as are either contrary to, or incompatible with the provisions of the code.

Only with the promulgation of the Civil Code of 1825 and Act 83 of the 1828 legislature which abrogated any laws not embodied in the 1825 code, did the Supreme Court stop considering the Spanish law as being in force. 24

Not all of the Court's time was occupied in hearing and deciding cases. Part of its routine activities consisted of administering the business of the court and regulating admissions to the bar. The Court examined those persons who wanted to practice law in Louisiana and set rules under which they qualified for examination. Between March, 1813, and May, 1818, the Court admitted a total of eighty-nine men to the bar in the eastern district, fifty-eight of them in 1813. 25 Exercising its administrative authority, the Court established criteria for admissions in 1813 and amended it in 1816. The judges ruled in 1813 that no one would be examined for admission unless he had a license to practise from another state or a certificate stating that he had served in the office of a practising attorney for three years. An in 1816, they lowered the requisite number of years with the stipulation that any candidate for admission would be admitted after two years of study with a member of the Louisiana bar providing the candidate also had a degree from one of the "incorporated seminaries."²⁶

The structure, functions, jurisdiction, and composition of the Court remained essentially unchanged until 1839 when the legislature increased the number of judges to five. In 1845, the new constitution bestowed the court with appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases, and in 1894, legislation freed the Court from riding circuit. Judge Derbigny retired in 1820 to become Louisiana Secretary of State, Judge Mathews died in 1836 while still serving on the Court, and Judge Martin retired in 1845. Today the work and the decisions of this first Supreme Court are still highly regarded by the members of Louisiana's legal establishment.²⁷

The First Minute Book 1813-1818

In November, 1976, the Supreme Court of Louisiana placed its historic records in the custody of the University of New Orleans. The collection, consisting of minute books, docket books, opinion books, and case files, chronicles the Court's activities from its inception in 1813 to 1921. Generally these records have been well preserved; however, through the years some items have been lost. For safety and preservation, the State Archives has microfilmed everything in the collection except the case files which are presently being sorted and arranged into their original order.

The First Minute Book of the Supreme Court is a small, yet significant, part of this collection, documenting the formative years of the Court's past. Dating from March, 1813, to May, 1818, the 340-page manuscript records the business of the Court's sessions at New Orleans, the seat of the eastern appellate district. Entries include the date of the meeting, the attending judges, a note on adjournment, and the day of the next session. In addition to this standard information, the record contains references to the cases before the court, the disposition of cases, court rules, and admissions to the bar.

During the roughly six and a half years covered by the Minute Book, the Court acted as the pivotal unit in the legal structure of the new state. Through its rules and decisions the Court interpreted and defined its authority, as well as its jurisdiction. It established its role at the top of the state's judicial structure, giving order to a system in transition.

The Court records not only relate the history of the Court, but also give insight into the society at this period of Louisiana history. New Orleans and Louisiana were undergoing a tremendous economic and social transformation during this period. The city was becoming a hub of national and international trade, an outlet for the new southern cotton agriculture, as well as a trading and commercial center for the growing populations of the United States heartland. The post-Purchase influx of Americans, refugees from the crumbling Spanish empire, and the growing slave population created new social conditions and a realignment of the power structure. Much of this growth and turmoil in the social and economic life of the city and state is reflected in the Court's records.

Editing Procedures

The purpose of this edition is to provide wider access to the Minute Book and to lead researchers to complementary sources. It is a readable copy that preserves the original contents of the Minute Book. This rendition of the text conforms to modern practices of historical editing recommended in the Harvard Guide to American History. No attempt has been made to produce a facsimile of the original.

Because the Minute Book was written in a clerk's hand, few problems have been encountered in transcribing the manuscript. The spacing and indentation of headings and case citations have been standardized and set flush with the left margin to conserve paper. Names of the attending judges have been set across the page rather than on separate lines and the form of their names has been standardized.

All abbreviations, except "Junr.," "Senr.," and "Esq.(Esqr.)," have been expanded using square brackets to indicate added letters. The ampersand has been retained, but "&c." has been rendered "etc." to conform to modern usage. To avoid cluttering the text with square brackets, the following three frequently abbreviated words, "honorable," "appellant," and "appellee" have been silently expanded. When I have had to supply these last two words because of a clerk's omission, I have placed them in square brackets.

Subject to the following exceptions, spelling, punctuation, and capitalization remain as found in the original. Sentences begin with capital letters and end in the appropriate punctuation. Superscript... words or syllables, plus interlineations, are brought to line. Marginalia are inserted in the text at the proper place and enclosed in double parentheses, thus distinguishing them from parentheses in the original. Omitted letters and words, if known, are supplied in square brackets. Words bracketed thus "[?]" were illegible, but represent the editor's best guess. When a single word is missing and cannot be supplied, the word "blank" has been inserted, underlined, and enclosed in brackets.

In the manuscript, persons are often mentioned only by surname.
The first time a name occurs in the text, every attempt has been made to supply the first and middle names or initials; thereafter, only first and middle initials are given. All such interpolations are enclosed in square brackets. To facilitate reference to the originial manuscript and because of the length of the text, original page numbbers have been supplied in square brackets set flush with the right margin unless a page changes in the middle of a sentence or paragraph in which instance the bracketed number has been inserted within the text.

A final word must be added about docket numbers. Each case appealed to the Supreme Court was docketed and assigned a number.
This number is important as a reference to the case files which contain the transcript of the case proceedings in the lower court. It also enables the reader to differentiate between several appeals made by the same parties. Without the docket numbers, reading the Minute Book becomes confusing. Therefore, missing docket numbers, obtained from Docket Book I for the eastern district, have been added and bracked. The addition of missing docket numbers and the annotation of legal terms, names, and cases furnishes the researcher with important references for further investigation into the individual case transcript files and other historical sources. It also makes the Minute Book more comprehensible.

The Notes to the Text

An effort has been made to identify and annotate as many persons as possible. However, given the large number of names, detailed research would have been unfeasible. If information was unavailable in the case files, standard biographical sources, newspapers, city directories, or standard histories, annotations have not been given. No attempt has been made to describe each of the 290 cases included in the minutes, but references have been provided to the cases reported in Martin's Reports. Standard legal citation form has been used in these notes. The appropriate pages in the Docket Book have also been cited.

The Syndics of Edward Brooks, appellants vs. William & John Weyman, Appellees

Upon an appeal from the District Court for the first judicial District.

This day appeared the parties aforesaid by their Attorneys, and the cause being argued, the Court delivered the following Opinion in writing, to wit;

"A verdict had been recovered in the late Superior Court. A motion had been there made for a new trial. In pursuance of the Act organizing the Supreme & inferior Courts of this State, the case was transferred to the first District Court. The motion was there argued & the new trial refused. The Court are of opinion that the refusal to grant the new trial, is no cause of appeal; that according to uniform practise, the judgement would be nunc pro tunc—that this Court having already decided that no appeal lay from the Superior to the Supreme Court, the present must be dismissed."

Whereupon it is ordered by the Court that judgement be entered up in favor of the Appellee, and that the Appellant do pay him his costs [$25.00] in this behalf expended. And it is further ordered that a copy of the Opinion be certified to the said District Court. And then the Court adjourned till Thursday next at 10 o'clock A.M.

No. 5

Upon an appeal from the District Court for the first judicial District.

The Court being now sufficiently advised of and concerning the premises, and having inspected the Record and proceedings in this case, delivered in their opinion in writing, and Ordered that judgment be entered as follows, to wit:

The Court are of opinion that F[Francis] X. Bermudez was at the time of his failure, the true owner of the lot of land in contest; that the decree ordering a stay of proceedings against him ought to have stopped the judicial sale of that land, and that the sale made in contravention to it was illegal and void. It is therefore ordered that the said lot be surrendered to the Syndics of the Creditors of F[Francis] X. Bermudez, for the purpose of selling it within the usual delay of judicial sales, payable, to wit, the sum of six thousand six hundred and six dollars and seventy-five cents in cash, to satisfy the claim of [Ferdinand] Ibanez; and the remainder at such credit as they may think proper to fix agreeably to the directions by them receiv'd from their constituents; unless the said Syndics choose to satisfy the said sum to [Ferdinand] Ibanez. And it is further ordered that the parties do pay their respective costs, and it is further ordered that a copy of the opinion be certified to the Dis[tric]t Court.

NOTES TO THE INTRODUCTION

1 The judges of the Superior Court of the Territory, at the time of the adoption of the State Constitution of 1812, resigned their United States commissions and decided that they automatically constituted the transitional high court of appeals. They would sit until the legislature organized the state courts in 1813. The judges called this court the Superior Court of the State of Louisiana. See Henry P. Dart, "History of the Supreme Court of Louisiana," Louisiana Reports, CXXXIII (1913), xxxvi.

While the digest is often referred to as a code, it is not. It did not replace the laws as a code would have done, but it merely formed a compilation. The question of the sources of the digest have been a continual source of debate. Two of the recent protagonists in this argument are Robert Pascal and Rodolfo Batiza. For a discussion of these arguments see Dargo, Jefferson's Louisiana, 156-164.

29 Because the original was inaccessible for the year it was on display at the Supreme Court, I used the microfilm copy for my original transcription. By the time I had finished my typed transcript, the Court had returned the volume to the UNO Archives, and I was able to verify my copy against the original. It should be noted that many of the page numbers are missing from the microfilm copy because these were later pencilled onto the original by the archivist.

30 Only two pages of the Minute Book have been printed previously. The Louisiana Reports, Volume 133, published the commissions of Judge Hall and Judge Mathews in an article on the centenary of the Court.
NOTES TO THE MINUTE BOOK

1 Dominick Augustin Hall was born in 1765 in South Carolina. In 1804, he was appointed United States District Court Judge for the Orleans Territory. Judge Hall held this post until his appointment to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana. His brief stay on the Court lasted only until July, 1813. Hall claimed that his limited knowledge of the civil law hindered the performance of his duty. He died on December 19, 1820. (DAB: NODP, 31 March 1865)

2 George Mathews was born near Staunton, Virginia, on September 21, 1774. In 1805, he was appointed as a judge for the Territorial Court of the Mississippi Territory. One year later Mathews was transferred to the Territory of Orleans. Appointed to the Supreme Court of the state, he remained on the Court until his death on November 14, 1836. Judge Mathews is buried in the cemetery of the Grace Episcopal Church in St. Francisville, Louisiana. (Fortier, 2:139-40; JUS, 258)

3 Louis Barthelemy Macarty served as Secretary of State from 1812 to 1816. He died on December 4, 1846, at the age of sixty-two. (CD-1811, 40; LAND, 5 December 1846.)

4 Francis Xavier Martin was born on March 17, 1762, in Marseilles, France. By 1786, he had emigrated to North Carolina, where he practised law for twenty years. In 1809, he was appointed United States Judge for the Mississippi Territory, and the following year was transferred to the Orleans Territory. Martin served as the first Attorney General of the State of Louisiana from 1813 to 1815. In 1815, he was appointed to the State Supreme Court. Judge Martin became principal judge of the Court in 1836. He retired in 1845 and died shortly thereafter on December 11, 1846. During his lifetime Martin wrote several books, of which the following are best known: 1) History of North Carolina and 2) History of Louisiana. (DAB; NCAB, 5:436; NOCB, 11 December 1846.)

5John Bartow Prevost was born in 1770. He was appointed Judge of the Superior Court of the Territory of Orleans in 1804 and served in that position until 1808. After his retirement from the bench, Prevost practised law in New Orleans. He died on March 5, 1825. (JUS, 324-25.)

6Edward Livingston, one of the most prominent citizens and influential legal minds in Louisiana in the early 1800's, was born in New York state on May 26, 1764. There he studied and practised law, becoming active in politics and serving as a member of Congress, as United States Attorney, and as mayor of New York City. Upon coming to Louisiana in 1804, Livingston continued to practise law. He became an important figure in the struggle to preserve Louisiana's civil law tradition. (See George Dargo's Jefferson's Louisiana) In 1820, Livingston was elected to the Louisiana House of Representatives. From 1823 to 1829, he was a member of the United States House of Representatives, and from 1829 to 1831, he represented Louisiana in the United States Senate. President Jackson, a long-time friend, appointed him Secretary of State in 1831. By this time Livingston had moved back to his native New York, where he died on May 23, 1836. (BDAC, 1297-98; NCAB, 5:293.)

7John Randolph Grymes was born in Vancluse, Virginia, on December 14, 1786. He arrived in New Orleans around 1810 and began studying law in the office of his brother, Philip, who was a United States Attorney. When Philip retired in 1811, John took over for a brief period. Grymes, who married Governor Claiborne's widow, was a member of the state legislature in 1820 and a member of the 1845 constitutional convention. He died on December 3, 1854. (NOCL, 5 December 1854; New Orleans Evening Chronicle, 30 May 1885.)

8 Auguste Davezac de Castera, born in May, 1780, in Santo Domingo, studied law in the offices of Edward Livingston, whose second wife was Davezac's sister. He served as the charge d'affairs to the Hague under President Jackson. Davezac died on February 15, 1851, in New York, where he had taken up residency. (DAB; NODP, 23 April 1863.)

9 Abraham R. Ellery had been practising law in Louisiana at least since 1808. His office was in the Custom House. (CD-1809, 214; CD-1811, 21.)

10 William A. Depeyster, a native of New Jersey, was born in 1784. He fought with Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. Depeyster died on January 27, 1818, at the age of thirty-four. (NOLG, 4 April 1815 and 29 January 1818.)

11 Etienne Mazureau, born in La Rochelle, France, in 1777, was trained in the French and Spanish legal systems before emigrating to New Orleans in 1804. Mazureau continued to practise law in Louisiana, where he became one of the prominent legal minds in the territory and the state. He was also a leading proponent for the retention of Louisiana's civil law system. He was a member of the 1811 constitutional convention and served as a member of both the Louisiana House of Representatives and the Senate. Mazureau held the position of Abner Lawson Duncan, a leading lawyer and prominent citizen, had law offices on Royal Street. He served as an advisor to General Wilkinson during the British invasion. In 1820, he, along with Pierre Derbigny and Stephen Henderson, received an exclusive five-year privilege to establish a steam ferry boat to cross the Mississippi River. (CD-1809, 214; CD-1811, 16; NOT, 5 June 1864.)

Alfred Hennen, born in Maryland, on October 27, 1786, settled in New Orleans in 1809, where he began practising law. He had a long and distinguished legal career. For several years prior to his death, he taught common and constitutional law at the University of Louisiana. Hennen died on January 19, 1870, at the age of eighty-four. (NOCB, 20 January 1870; Louis Voss, comp., Presbyterianism in New Orleans. (New Orleans: Presbyterian Board of Publications of the Synod of Louisiana, 1931), 24 (hereafter cited as Voss, Presbyterianism).

John B. Paillette died on September 10, 1821. (NOCL, 21 September 1821.)

Nathan Morse was active in New Orleans politics. He ran an unsuccessful race for mayor against Augustin Macarty in 1815. He was also involved in business schemes. In 1820, he was granted a privilege to construct a turnpike from Lake Pontchartrain to the Mississippi River. (NOT, 5 June 1864.)

16Pierre Louis Morel (Morrel) was born in Rennes, France, in April, 1777. He settled in New Orleans in 1804 after having been in Spain and Jamaica. He began his career in Louisiana as translator for the Superior Court of the Orleans Territory. A close friend of Etienne Mazureau, Morel was active in politics and served as a member of the Louisiana House of Representatives. He died on May 10, 1826. (NOCL, 13 May, 1826.)

17Henry Marie Brackenridge was a lawyer and an author. Born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on May 11, 1786, he practised law in his home state and in Missouri. In 1811, Brackenridge came to Louisiana. As a member of the constitutional convention of 1811, he helped to write the judicial article. Later he served as a deputy attorney general and as a state district judge. In 1817, he moved to Maryland, where he served in the Maryland legislature. Before leaving Louisiana, Brackenridge published Views of Louisiana (1814). He died on January 18, 1871. (DAB; JUS, 38.)

18Abraham (Abram) Mace practised law in Louisiana at least as early as 1809. He also served as a justice of the peace. (United States Census of Population for 1810.)

19Dominique Seghers died on January 12, 1848, at the age of eighty-one. (NOCL, 12 January 1848.)

20Samuel C. Young lived along Bayou St. John. He practised law in New Orleans as early as 1809. (CD-1811, 55.)

21Louis Casimir Elizabeth Moreau Lislet, born in 1767 in Cap Francais, Santo Domingo, was a lawyer, judge, politician, and prominent citizen of Louisiana. He was a justice of the peace (1806) and judge of the New Orleans City Court (1808). In 1808, he and James Brown prepared the Digest (or Code) of 1808. He also helped Pierre Derbigny and Edward Livingston write the Code in 1825. Moreau Lislet held the office of State Attorney General from 1817 to 1818. Shortly after this time he was elected to the state Senate. He died on December 3, 1832. (CD-1807, 63,66; CD-1809, 118; CD-1811, 36, 57, 59.)

22 Thomas C. Nicholas served as a justice of the peace in New Orleans. (Martin's Reports)

23 Joachim Lozano served as translator for the Parish Court of Orleans Parish. (CD-1807, 62; CD-1809, 169.)

24 George Pollock was a lawyer and merchant active in both politics and commerce. During the territorial period, he was an officer in the Orleans Navigation Company and the New Orleans Branch of the First Bank of the United States. He also served on the city council and was a justice of the peace. Pollock died on August 19, 1862. (New Orleans Daily True Delta, 21 August 1862; NOLG, 1 April 1808; CD-1807, 60,63,203; CD-1809, 210.)

25 John (Jean) Blanque came to Louisiana in 1803 with Laussat. He remained and before his death in October, 1815, Blanque had served as a city councilman, a representative to the territorial legislature, a member of the constitutional convention of 1811, and a member of the state House of Representatives. He was also active in the business community, serving on the Board of Directors of the Bank of Louisiana (1811). (CD-1809, 162,199; CD-1811, 57, 60; Fortier, 1: 107-108; Tinker, Les Ecrit, 41.)
26 Charles Robert Caune practised law in Louisiana as early as 1806. His offices were on Dauphine Street. (CD-1807, 66; CD-1809, 214; CD-1811, 12.)

27 Peter(Pierre) Auguste Charles Bourguignon Derbigny was born in Laon, France, in 1770. He settled in Louisiana in 1797, becoming active in politics and law. Derbigny served as a judge of the Supreme Court of Louisiana from 1813 to 1820. He was secretary of state (1820-1827) and governor (1828-1829). One of his major contributions to the Louisiana legal system was the civil code (1825) that he produced with Moreau Lislet and Edward Livingston. Derbigny died on October 6, 1829, as the result of a carriage accident in Gretna, Louisiana. (DAB; NOT, 10 July 1864; Robert Sobel and John Raimo, eds. Biographical Directory of the Governors of the United States, 1789-1978, 4 vols. (Westport, CT.: Meckler Books, 1978), 2:559.)

The "Corporation" refers to the city government of New Orleans, including the mayor and aldermen (councilmen).

The Navigation Company is the Orleans Navigation Company, which was chartered in 1805 to develop navigation from Opelousas to the Mississippi and from Lake Pontchartrain to the Mississippi. It is worthy of note that between 1806 and 1810, thirteen of the men who served on the board of directors of the company simultaneously served on the city council. For a brief but interesting discussion of the Orleans Navigation Company's interconnection with the city government see John G. Clark's New Orleans 1718-1812: An Economic History, 287-96.

Fielding L. Turner opened his law offices on Chartres Street in 1815. Though the Minute Book states that Mr. Turner had been examined earlier, it is not recorded on previous pages. (NOLG, 25 April 1815 and 30 September 1817.)
Peter Francis Missonet served as an Orleans Parish Commissioner and justice of the peace between 1808 and 1811. (Moniteur, 16 March 1808; NOLG, 7 April 1809)

Eugier Fromentin was born in France. Fleeing the French Revolution, he emigrated to Maryland, where he studied law. Shortly before 1805, Fromentin moved to Louisiana to practise. From 1807 to 1811, he served as Clerk of the House of Representatives of the territorial legislature. He also held the position of secretary of the constitutional convention of 1811. Later Fromentin was elected to the United States Senate, serving from 1813 to 1819. He died on October 6, 1822, a victim of yellow fever. (BDAC, 973; CD-1805; Fortier, 1:475)

Stephen A. Hopkins practised law in Ascension Parish. He served as speaker of the Louisiana House of Representatives from 1812 to 1814. Hopkins was shot to death near the Lafourche Courthouse on October 21, 1815. His assailant, Pierre Valet, had been found guilty in a case prosecuted by Mr. Hopkins. (NOLG, 26 October 1815 and 31 October 1815)

New Orleans merchant. He was on the board of directors of the Bank of Louisiana (1805-1811), of the Orleans Navigation Company (1806-1811), and the New Orleans Insurance Company (1805-1807). Lanusse also was president of the Chamber of Commerce in 1807. By the 1820's his finances had suffered a severe set-back. On October 19, 1825, he died at the age of forty-nine in Soto La Marina, Mexico, while trying to rebuild his fortune. (CD-1805; CD-1807, 69, 70-72,80; CD-1809, 201; CD-1811, 32,60; Clark, 343; NOCL, 24 November 1825.)

Charles Boromee Dufau was a commission merchant in New Orleans.
For a time he was a partner of Pierre Francois DuBourg in a brokerage house. This partnership was dissolved in 1807. (CD-1811, 17; NOLG, 25 December 1807.)

Charles Bourcier was a merchant and partner of Paul Lanusse.
(CD-1811)

Peter(Pierre) Francis(Francois) Dubourg resided in New Orleans since the early 1800's. A broker and merchant by trade, Dubourg was active in the business community and in politics. In 1810, he served on the city council. In that same year, he was on the Board of Directors of the Orleans Navigation Company. Between the years 1805 and 1811, Dubourg also served on the boards of directors of various other companies and civic groups. He was Collector of Customs from 1813 to 1815. Dubourg died on January 29, 1830. (Argus, 30 January 1830;

Emily Phillips, formerly Emily Stillman of Connecticut, married George T. Phillips on October 2, 1804. They settled in New Orleans shortly thereafter. (CTF)

James Johnston, James C. Williamson, and William Nott. (CTF)

George T. Phillips established himself as a merchant in New Orleans in 1804. He also was a ship owner, slave trader, and landowner of some worth. He was a stockholder in the New Orleans Insurance Company and an officer of the New Orleans Branch of the First Bank of the United States. Phillips became insolvent in April, 1808, and died sometime before 1810. (CD-1807, 71, 82; CD-1809, 201, 210; Clark, 318; NOLG, 1 March 1805.)

Henry Carleton, lawyer, judge, and author, was born in 1785 in Virginia. He came to New Orleans in 1814 and studied law in the offices of Edward Livingston. In 1815, he married Mrs. Edward (Louise Davezac) Livingston's sister (Agla Davezac). (They were the sisters of Auguste Davezac de Castera who had studied law with Living- ston.) Carleton along with Louis Moreau Lislet translated Las Siete Partidas, the Spanish legal code that had been in force in Louisiana. This translation represents his lasting contribution to Louisiana legal history. He was appointed United States Attorney for the eastern district of Louisiana in 1832 and held the position until 1837. From 1837 to 1839, Carleton served on the Louisiana Supreme Court. He retired because of ill-health and moved to Philadelphia, where he pursued a career as a biblical scholar until his death on March 28, 1863. (DAB; NODP, 23 April 1863.)

Charles Derbigny became Clerk of the Supreme Court on June 7, 1814. He held this position until November, 1820. In 1836, Derbigny served as a member of the Louisiana Senate. He died on December 29, 1874, at the age of eighty-three. (LANO, 30 December 1874; NOT, 25 September 1864.)

90 Theophile DeMello was a trader, merchant, and ship owner who resided in St. Salvador, Brazil. He owned a ship involved in this litigation which had carried 300 slaves from Africa to Pensacola. Chew and Relf (see notes below) had commissioned to sell these slaves in Louisiana. (CTF)

91 Joseph Walden and Joseph Walden & Company, were merchants in South Carolina. (CTF)

92 Beverly Chew was one of the leading citizens and most influential businessmen in Louisiana. Between 1805 and 1811, Chew was on the boards of directors of eight different companies. He formed a partnership with Richard Relf and Daniel Clark in 1801. This partnership survived into the 1830's. Chew along with Relf played a key role in establishing the insurance business in New Orleans. In 1832, he was elected president of the Canal Banking Company. He also served as Collector of Customs from 1816 to 1829. Beverly Chew died on January 13, 1851, at the age of seventy-eight. (Argus, 16 May 1829; Clark, 330-31, 341; NOCB, 14 January 1851.)

Richard Relf came to Louisiana from Philadelphia about 1791, when he was sixteen years old. He first worked as a clerk for Daniel Clark. In 1801, he and Beverly Chew formed a partnership with Clark. It was dissolved in 1813. Relf, like Chew, was an active businessman. He founded the New Orleans Insurance Company in 1805. He also served on the Board of Directors of the Orleans Navigation Company from 1806 to 1810. As a gauge of his predominant position in the New Orleans business community, it should be noted that he served on fourteen various boards of directors between 1805 and 1811. He held the position of Cashier of the Louisiana State Bank from 1818 to 1857. Relf died on October 22, 1857, at the age of eighty-two. (Clark, 293, 330-31, 341; Nolan B.
