after café wha? and the gaslight

Elizabeth Theriot

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.uno.edu/ellipsis

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarworks.uno.edu/ellipsis/vol41/iss1/26

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Department of English and Foreign Languages at ScholarWorks@UNO. It has been accepted for inclusion in Ellipsis by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks@UNO. For more information, please contact scholarworks@uno.edu.
chords pull a leashed alphabet through the bar, a half-hour tourniquet that binds verses for another shuffled neon tribe; all grey, and the red eyes blinking.
he never planned to stay anyway, ot in this hole of patronizing brows and ugly light ugly ice-cold heart attacks

(them)

odes at the foot of an iron hospice bed, the first father’s calloused hand blesses the new first son newly crowned prophet

“this machine kills fascists” his guitar read, and “careful what you wish for, boy” he might have said.

(while)

1. a generation swallowed dry by rhythmic lamentations
2. the whip-lash howl of social dissention
3. scorn shaded blue and it was only 1962.

(like hell he’d be crucified for self-appointed wise men cant sell tickets if you’re dead cant sell vinyl nothing’s final in this city but the gutter